1. Best Movie Website: Subway Cinema

Paul Kazee, Brian Naas, Goran Topalovic and Grady Hendrix — the Subway Cinema Collective — are the fevered brains behind the annual Asian Films Are Go!!! series, which provides a Manhattan showcase for the ginchiest of Korean, Japanese, Thai and Hong Kong pop cinema. Last fall they unearthed a grotty grotto of HK horror movies. But the site is a treat even (especially) for those who can't get to New York, since the collective's program notes are often more illuminating than the films they tub-thump for. Note Hendrix's meditation-hallucination on the beatitudes of the serial-killer thriller "Red to Kill." Less entrepreneurs than informed fans, and less fans than fantasts, Subway will occasionally not bother to hook a program note to a program, instead cranking up 1950 words on "Holy Virgin vs the Evil Dead."
